Art Unit:

The amendment after final rejection of 6/20/97 will not be entered because this amendment requires further consideration and search. The previously considered claims did not require the limitations of the applicant's proposed amendment after final rejection. In view of the receipt of the Repp et al. patent in the IDS of 6/20/97, the amendment after final rejection requires further consideration with regard to what the adhesives of column 7, line 19 to column 8, line 40 are, particularly in view of the fact that the instant claims do not recite the specific ingredients and method of making the polyurethane adhesive of the instant claims. The specifics of the instantly claimed adhesives are expected to materially affect their performance. Furthermore, it is not seen that Repp et al. excludes two component polyurethane adhesives (column 8, lines 39-41). Preferred mode does not teach away from non-preferred modes. It is not seen that the instantly claimed language excludes structural members such as the channels in which the front windshields of a car sit. The angle of the windshield reduces the force applied against the adhesive force and the channel provides some support for the windshield. While there is typically some kind of trim on the outer portion of the windshield, it is distinct from the "bonded load bearing attachment member". There are also issues as to what the ordinary skilled artisan understands about the differences between the one and two component adhesives. This issue requires a further consideration of the prior art cited and a further search of the composition prior art, which was not required in examination of the previously examined claims. Thus, the instant claims are not clearly allowable and the proposed amendment requires further consideration and search.
